

Chinese 3260: Chinese Culture Today

Course Description:

This course examines forms of popular culture and processes of social change in urban China and Chinese-speaking societies. In this course, we will explore the diversity, history, and creativity of modern Chinese culture and develop innovative approaches to the understanding of Chinese culture today. Topics of discussion include the cultural industry, commodity fetishism, youth cult, sexuality and gender, postmodernity, the changing meanings of labor and leisure in the contemporary world. In addition to the textbook, readings, viewings, and listening include popular music, film clips, photography, visual arts, television dramas, and web-based publication. Students are encouraged to augment the readings with their own projects. Taught in Chinese.

Required Textbook:

Chih-ping Chou et al, Anything Goes: An Advanced Reader of Modern Chinese. (Revised Edition) (Princeton University Press, 2011)

Additional audio-visual materials will be available on course website.

The textbook could be purchased at UConn Co-Op Bookstore.

Recommended:
