   by this committee were also approved at the College meeting of Nov. 3. A proposed amendment to reduce the W requirement from three courses to two was defeated.
   (ii) The Committee appointed a “Task Force on Writing” to investigate resources and
   (iii) On a motion from Hiskes, the Committee approved two editorial changes in the CLAS requirements passed by the College on Nov. 3 in order to eliminate the possibility that students might satisfy the CLAS requirements without satisfying the University requirements:
       (a) Following the paragraph on “Quantitative Reasoning” insert the following paragraph:
       The courses in Content Areas One, Two, and Three below must be taken in at least eight different academic units. This distribution ensures that students also satisfy University

The study of history aims at the understanding and disciplined reconstruction of past human activities, institutions, ideas, and aspirations in the light of present knowledge and in the hope of usefulness for the future. History belongs both to the humanities and to the social sciences. It is studied both for its own sake and for the light it throws on the present problems and future prospects of particular societies and of humankind in general.

A major in history in combination with work in foreign languages, philosophy, literature, and the social sciences provides a broad foundation for informed citizenship. History majors find employment in many fields of human endeavor from arts and business to public service and zymurgy. Specialization in history is especially valuable as pre-professional training for law, government, diplomacy, and journalism and for library, archival, and museum administration.

Requirements for the Major in History: Undergraduate majors are required to take at least 27 credits in 200-level courses, which must include one three-credit course from each of Groups A, B, and C, and two three-credit courses from Group D. All majors must take HIST 211 in the semester following their declaration as majors, and all majors except Honors students must take HIST 297W in their senior year. Honors students should take in sequence 297W and 200W or 299 and 200W. With the consent of the undergraduate major's advisor, 300-level courses may be used to fulfill the distribution requirement. HIST 211 and 297W satisfy the Information Literacy Competency. HIST 200W or 297W satisfy the “Writing in the Major” requirements.

Group A - Ancient, Medieval, and Early Modern: HIST 203, 212 (or ANTH 257), 213 (or CAMS 253), 214 (or CAMS 254), 216 (or CAMS 255), 217 (or CAMS 243), 218 (or CAMS 256, HEB 218, JUDS 218), 219, 220, 250, 251, 255, 257 (or CAMS 250), 261, 267, 271, 272, 273, 274.

Anthropology studies human beings of all times and places. It examines human biological, cultural and social similarities and differences, and tries to explain them. Because of its broad perspective - which stresses writing, critical thinking, and social analysis - anthropology provides an excellent preparation for a variety of professional and business careers. Anthropology can also be an integral part of the training for life that is the goal of the University's liberal arts program.

All majors must take the following courses: a 100 level Anthropology course, as well as ANTH 214, 220, 233, and 244. Students must take at least one course in an ethnographic area (ANTH 221, 222, 223, 225, 226, 227W, 228, 229, 230, 238, 241, 270). Finally, to satisfy the Writing in the Major competency, all majors must pass at least one of the department’s designated 200-level writing courses: ANTH 212W, 220W, 246W, 257W, 262W, 263W, or 288W.

In addition, majors must take at least three 200 level anthropology courses two of which are not ethnographic area courses. We strongly recommend that majors take ANTH 212 and a course in research methods (ANTH 249 or ANTH 268). These courses should be taken during the student’s senior year, if possible.

A minor in Anthropology is described in the Minors section.

Environmental Science
The major in Environmental Science is based in the physical and biological sciences, but also includes course work in selected areas of the social sciences. The major leads to a Bachelor of Science degree, and may be adopted by students in either the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources or the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. This curriculum offers a comprehensive approach to the study of environmental problems, including not only a rigorous scientific background, but also detailed analyses of the social and economic implications of environmental issues. The complexity and interdisciplinary nature of environmental science is reflected in the core requirements of the major. These courses, assembled from several different academic departments representing two colleges, provide both breadth and depth, preparing students for careers that deal with environmental issues and for graduate study in environmental science and related fields.
