The Center for International Social Work Studies engages students, faculty and community in international and human rights learning and action.

Since its inception, the Center has:

- Hosted visiting scholars from more than 37 countries
- Sponsored several seminars, lunch-hour programs, and panel sessions each year on global issues
- Organized internships and student trips to the United Nations
- Developed an elective specialization in International Issues and graduate courses on development, human rights, and immigration
- Sponsored conferences on international social work, human rights, human trafficking and international adoption
- Supported current and past exchange programs in Jamaica, Armenia, Germany, Denmark, Mauritius and England
- Participated in advocacy and social action projects
- Encouraged faculty engagement in international conferences and research